

Braided Calculations

The girl born with her eye always on the bottom line watches her mother chisel debts into the family ledger, sees her father pluck another multi-digit expense and lay the receipt before her, a heavy love letter.
They keep their voices soft but whisper sharp. Again, the girl heads for her burrow, a bunker in the basement where she collects a wealth of cast-off
buttons, glass beads,
a faded, folded map,
her mother's 4-H ribbons.
She keeps a hidden cashbox here, counts
out her stack of pennies, her silver coins and paper money. Never enough she knows, but she lurches upward with her contribution.
