

Down waterlogged steps, I come to a garden

Bulbous squirts and vase-shaped sprung a puffed a wily twist. Black flowers unloved and began to sing—darker a voice calling from the porch, gardens and magnolia.

